Sambo

Jesus has been the dominant historical figure for the last 20 centuries. Even our dating system divides time before and after his life. His influence has shaped every part of our social and political fabric and countless people around the world claim to have a real, personal relationship with him that gives them meaning and motivates their actions.

We can forget that this Jesus is the same Jesus born in a stable and laid in an animal feeding trough. This Jesus was a refugee, fleeing with his parents to Egypt as a young child. This Jesus was a carpenter's apprentice, and then an itinerant preacher with no home and few possessions. He died a criminal's death and was buried in a borrowed tomb. Resurrected to new life, he came to the marginalised and poor.

Jesus forces us to look at poverty in new ways.

Come and join us this Christmas and explore how this history-changer still changes the world today.
